OU Plans Approved
For Radio Station
To Train Students

KUVU

NORMAN, Dec. .--University of Oklahoma radio students are going to learn their broadcasting by actual experience.

The board of regents recently approved a student managed and operated station on the campus which also will serve as a laboratory in radio journalism methods. Confined to on-campus coverage, the new station will be wired directly into the various houses receiving the broadcasts.

Programs will emphasize news summaries, popular music and sports, with broadcasts planned six nights a week. Eventually coverage will be extended from the main campus to living quarters on the north and south campus.
